RALPH G. H. SIU CHOSEN AS ONE OF TOP CAREER PEOPLE IN GOVERNMENT

Dr. Ralph G. H. Siu, Technical Director of Research and Development in the Research and Engineering Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, Department of the Army, has been selected to receive one of the highly prized Career Service Awards of the National Civil Service League. The award will be presented to Dr. Siu on March 21 at a colorful dinner in Washington, D.C. that will be open to the public.

The League, a nonpartisan citizens' organization representing the public interest in improving government, this year will give its seventh series of Career Service Awards to ten Federal employees chosen for competence, character, and outstanding achievements.

Dr. Siu is a recognized International Scientist. He is a forceful leader among men who strive to focus Army scientific thought and development upon new horizons. His work in the radiation preservation of food has brought international renown to the Quartermaster Corps, the Army, and the country.

The key scientist in the radiation preservation of foods field, Dr. Siu has served as technical adviser to the Congressional Panel on the Peaceful uses of Atomic Energy and to the National Academy of Science. He has been the dynamic impetus behind a recently established U.S. Army Research and Development Series -- a significant collection of research results being published in book form. He has also extended his leadership to the application of scientific techniques for the improvement of supply operations. He has written many outstanding articles as well as leading scientific books, and he has traveled widely throughout the world in the interests of the Atoms for Peace Program.

Siu Award

Born in Honolulu, he was educated at the University of Hawaii and the California Institute of Technology. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Association for Advancement of Science, Peng Hui, Phi Kappa Phi, and many governmental committees.

MAX GOLDEN CHOSEN AS ONE OF TOP CAREER MEN IN GOVERNMENT

Max Golden, General Counsel of the U. S. Air Force, has been selected to receive one of the highly prized career Service Awards of the National Civil Service League. The award will be presented to Mr. Golden on March 21 at a colorful dinner in Washington, D. C. that will be open to the public.

The League, a nonpartisan citizens' organization representing the public interest in improving government, this year will give its seventh series of Career Service Awards to ten Federal employees chosen for competence, character and outstanding achievements.

As the General Counsel of the Air Force, Mr. Golden is the final legal authority on all matters arising within or referred to the Department of the Air Force, except those relating to the administration of military justice and such other matters as may be assigned to the Judge Advocate General by the Secretary of the Air Force. Under an extremely heavy load of responsibilities and often under considerable pressure, he has continuously demonstrated a legal capacity of a high order and outstanding duty performance. During his career, his initiative, forcefulness, and sagacity have been of immeasurable value in solving complex and difficult problems, and his alertness and foresight have resulted in considerable savings to the Air Force. His reputation for keen judgement and conscientiousness is widely known throughout the Air Force, and he is universally considered to be a model of what a career servant at the top level should be.

Born in Passaic, New Jersey, Mr. Golden was educated at New York University, Dana College, and Rutgers University. He lives in Arlington, Virginia and is a member of the Federal Bar Association and the Temple Beth-El Congregation.

FOR RELEASE: SUNDAY A.M., MARCH 12, 1961

MRS. CLARA B. GONZALES CHOSEN AS ONE OF TOP CAREER PEOPLE IN GOVERNMENT.

Clara B. Gonzales, Reservation Principal in the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior, has been selected to receive one of the highly prized Career Service Awards of the National Civil Service League. The award will be presented to Mrs. Gonzales on March 21 at a colorful dinner in Washington, D.C. that will be open to the public.

The League, a nonpartisan citizens' organization representing the public interest in improving government, this year will give its seventh series of Career Service Awards to ten Federal employees chosen for competence, character, and outstanding achievements.

As a master teacher and an able administrator, Mrs. Gonzales has served the nation in the field of education for more than thirty-seven years. Responsible for the overall administration and supervision of the educational activities of the Zuni Indian Agency, she unselfishly works to provide the educational ingredients which will develop each child to his utmost potential.

She has been highly successful in inspiring Zuni devotion to education. When Mrs. Gonzales came to the Zuni Pueblo, very few of its members were in school. Now, largely because of her efforts, the percentage in schools and institutions of higher learning exceeds that of non-Indian communities on the periphery of the village.

The Indian people do not hesitate to bring their problems to Mrs. Gonzales, so confident are they of her understanding and help. She has taken every opportunity to help them broaden their horizons. The Zuni people, as well as her co-workers, have a deep regard for Mrs. Gonzales because throughout her career the Zuni Pueblo has been her classroom; and the understanding, love and affection for the Zuni people have been her basic textbook.

Born in Paulina, Louisiana, Mrs. Gonzales was educated at Southwest Louisiana Institute, Louisiana State University, Peabody College, Loyola University and the University of Southern California. She lives in Zuni, New Mexico and is active in many civic affairs. She has cooperated in organizing and sponsoring 4-H Clubs, is local Chairman for the American Red Cross, President of Epsilon Sigma Alpha, and is a member of the New Mexico Education Association and the American Association of School Administrators.

ROBERT M. MACY CHOSEN AS ONE OF TOP CAREER PEOPLE IN GOVERNMENT

Robert M. Macy, Chief of the International Division of the Bureau of the Budget, has been selected to receive one of the highly prized Career Service Awards of the National Civil Service League. The award will be presented to Mr. Macy on March 21 at a colorful dinner in Washington, D. C. that will be open to the public.

The League, a nonpartisan citizens' organization representing the public interest in improving government, this year will give its seventh series of Career Service Awards to ten Federal employees chosen for competence, character, and outstanding achievements.

During the course of his career in the Federal service, Mr. Macy has gained a well-deserved reputation as an outstanding staff analyst and expert in international affairs. Since 1952, when he was selected as Chief of the International Division, Mr. Macy has administered the functions of the Bureau of the Budget for the international activities and foreign relations programs of the Federal Government, a position of great responsibility and importance. Prior to this time, he had gained recognition as an outstanding economist in three major fields: domestic industrial production, military requirements, and foreign economic assistance. Mr. Macy, with his quiet but forceful approach to the solution of difficult and complex government problems, has built a record of accomplishment as an analyst, planner, and coordinator in the program planning and financial management aspects of international affairs. In all positions held he has demonstrated great foresight and administrative ability and a keen analytical mind.

Macy Award

There have been few major study groups on international problems in recent years for which Mr. Macy's participation was not requested. He has made invaluable contributions to the foreign relations programs of the United States.

Born in Adel, Iowa, Mr. Macy was educated at the University of Iowa, Leland Stanford University, and Harvard.
